DAILY MEANDERINGS FOR A WANDERING MIND

Instructions Upon Opening

Published on August 11, 2016 — in Original Fiction and Poetry/Poetry — by Adam Sacks

This Life is not a Gift
It cannot be returned, exchanged or repackaged
It can be refound, restored and renewed
There can be no Peace It can't be dreamed of,
hoped for or wished
There can be unendless, inspired striving
You are not welcome in this world
You are simply there You can be thankful and keep the silence
You can be blind to the destiny
That you do not know is there
You are swept away, you are demolished Nothing but your legs carry you
They have no fear
Your heart pounds
And it has no fear
There is horror and that is the
Do not let go If the light has faded to the dwindle of A memory's flicker
It is all that shines Enough to show the way
In one surge forward we cover the earth

Remain where you will soon be
And don't even think to dream it will ever end
